

Lee Flad Communication's Power

People had a belief that I would & had already been doing the items/things that a Mentor would or could do. I had my own belief in people & potential along with the reality they needed something to support them. I like to be a Mentor because I am shown something new every time – I find accomplishment in the person I am working with & myself and – I find greater good...I am always amazed.

Oh my goodness – how I have changed – confidence in myself has increased – I have a greater understanding of potential – I do not assume anymore & I feel like I have more strength to say what I feel & think – the sky is the limit and after that there is the cosmos...

I am proud that I can be only the “voice” and I can state someone else’s thoughts, feelings and opinion...or that I can find ways to not even be the voice – just the person who helps bring it out itself.

My biggest challenge has been believing in myself – and then helping to explain this to the world.

My message to someone thinking about becoming a Communication Mentor is to just try and you too shall find Communication's Power
