

Pick of the Month – June 2014

Web Pick:

How Designers Are Failing People With Disabilities

From Hazlitt:

"Things might be different if those tasked with making assistive devices viewed their creations a bit more 'socially' and a little less 'medically'..... We encourage companies to look at people with disabilities and say, 'Okay, where is the real commercial value here? How can we leverage these insights to benefit everybody?' Now, all of a sudden, the whole thing gets flipped on its head, and disability becomes a big asset."

Read the full article at: <http://www.randomhouse.ca/hazlitt/feature/how-designers-are-failing-people-disabilities>