

Roy Diamond Infinitely Grateful

My son, Jacob, who has autism and epilepsy, and, as you know, is now 18, walked into Networks' Valley Forge office 18 months ago having never uttered more than a "Yeah" or "No", and, with facilitation, typed "I am not stupid". Since then, he has, with Networks' further training, learned to type with various teachers, parents, and trainers and friends. He has typed that he is a Republican, wants a girl, his mother is crazy and I am an a. He has typed that he is sad because of the autism, that his teachers are stupid, and that I am sad. In short, he has expressed himself like a typical teenager. For which he and all of us are infinitely grateful. Thank you from the bottom of our hearts.
